YESTERDAY was prize-day at the Schools known to the Colony best as the Baxter Girls (Vernacular) Schools. These schools, established thirty years ago, are connected with a Society at Home called the Society for Promoting Female Education in the East, and they combine Mission Work with general Education. Female Education is, as we know, a thing new to Orientals generally; and whether it will even receive universal sanction remains to be seen, though not in our time; but one thing is certain, that wherever these schools are planted there are soon scholars enough to tax all the energies of those who come out to superintend and teach them. In this Colony there is one Boarding-school at West Point, four day-schools in the city, one at Shau-ki-wan, and one at Stanley. The pupils 18; Benlarig, Dencalion, Glenroy, 21; at present number altogether 209. Of this number 131 were met altogether yesterday at Fairles, and an examination which had been going on for some time in various subjects was concluded in the morning,after which the scholars, arrayed in their best attire, were treated their present hard-working superintendent, Miss de Jersey, with tea, cakes, and other good things on the lawn. Some of them were from the here on or about Tuesday, the 8th Shankiwan School, and had never been to instant. This Packet brings reputes to town before. A Chinese house-proprietor in Queen's Road was brought before Mr Wodehouse the other day on a charge of failing to remove certain 'enclosures' in verandah in one of his tenements. It turned out in evidence that the 'enclosures consisted of two or three upright and horizontal bars which had formed part of the framework of a former enclosure. The prosecutor, Mr Drury, did not complain of the few bits of wood as being in themselves an 'enclosure,' but considered them objectionable because while they were there an enclosure could be easily rigged up again ! If this was not a straining of the law we should like to know what it was. The case, however, was carried no further. Mr

Wodehouse remanded it till to-day, and as An inquiry was held by Mr Wodehouse, at > his labour of love and put before the Colony the Hongkong Almanack for 1889. The value of this important work has been enhanced by several interesting additions. Among these are a Law Directory, which will prove a very contenient form of reference to the judical and legal establishments; a table showing the fluctuations in the dollar during the last 14 years, which reveals the autounding fact that if the decrease goes on at the same rate it will be worth nothing at all by 1929; a record of events and fires, and an obituary. All the statistical tables have been brought up to date and amplified. The amount of valuable and almost indispensable information about Hongkong contained in this work is almost inestimable. Details are given with regard to the tides, lighthouses, Church services, Chinese calendar, the weather and its relation to gardening operations, astronomical terms, oclipses, the difference in time between Hongkong and 68 different places. It contains a directory of the civil, judicial, military and naval establishments, consulates, churches, schools, masonio lodges, banks, shipping, insurance and public companies &c. &c. The part devoted to statistics of the Colony is of great value. The increase of the population i its various branches is traced from 1861, tables are given showing the development of the income and expenditure under various heads, the texation of the Colony, its shipping, the birth rate and death rate during the last 10 years, immigration and emigration and a vast number of other subjects about which information is of great use. The pages Mr Bruce Shepherd devotes to the land and land laws of the Colony should be of special importance at the present more especially as he is persage the sout competent person to talk on the sub let. PEKING NOTES. A Peking policeman, who seemed affable and intelligent, but who wore an uncommonly bad hat, says that the tribute from France consisting of a railway train with portable rails, has safely reached the palace of the Seventh Prince. 'Why was it first taken to the Prince's Palace? he was asked. The old man coughed mildly and said, 'It is written in the Book of Odes, "Quidquid id est, time: Danaos et dona feren es." which means. Stewart, of the Tientsin Arsenal: but it is extremely difficult to ascertain the truth about any of these matters. There is joy in Peking over the prospect of the railway being laid between Tungchow and Tientain.

It is interesting to observe from notices the pleasure which you are good in the Peking Gazette how the Chinese Goenough to say they have sometimes done | vernment deals the problems of admistration which tax the wisdom of the statesmen of other countries. In her efforts, for example, at co'onization China proceeds from a perfectly definite idea of the object to be attained, and it cannot be said that the methods she adopts are not marked with intelligence. Her attempts to utilize conviots to fill up the waste space in Turkestan and form a convenient substritum for official administration to work upon is quite equal to either French or English efforts in a similar direction in New Caledonia, Van Diemen's Lind, and the West Indian Plantations. And in some respects the Chinese are prompter in their action. When they perceive certain measures do not succoed a memorial from an official followed by an Edict from the Throne reverses them. from that Island. The besieging robels numbered sever I thousand men, and the District Magistrate Li Kan-ch'on but soldier of the garrison at each battlement of the city wall, armed with gun and sword and two soldiers at the more importan points, expecting the enemy would try and carry the place by escalade. Lamps, backed by thick paper in such a way as to show the light only outwards, were suspended on the battlements so that the garrison could observe the rebels below while their own movements were hid from them. Having discovered that the rebols had a secret understanding with the soldiers inside, the Magistrate also changed the positions of the various parties under his command, so that when, later on, the attacking force shouted to their confederates, the shout in reply might only mislead them as to the point to which they were to direct the attack, and they were received with a well-nourished fire of rifles and lost great numbers of men. The person really most active in inciting to the self-respect of the Government of the the revolt was one Shi of ! okkoug, a renegade member of the 'Gentry 'class, aided by others of his family, one of whom, Shi Kin-twan, took an active personal part in the siege. If Chang-hwa had fallen, the whole of Formosa would have been in danger; it was most fortunate therefore that General Lin Yin-t'ang should have arrived in the nick of time to raise the siege. When he attacked the rebels in the rear, the defenders on the walls were lowered down by ropes and attacked them on th other side, without waiting to open the city gates. Generals Chên Yün-k'ing and Chêng Tze-t'ao have gone with a force in three divisions against the aboriginal savages, who still hold out at Sin-tek and I-lan. Among other evidences of the growth of the subject of otection. Tientain is the sad necessity for enlarging the oreign Cometery.
